

Will Go to See Major Douglas

Glen L. MacLachlan, M.L.A. of Coronation, and chairman of the Social Credit Commission, is leaving at the earliest possible moment for England, where he will confer on the subject of engaging Major Douglas to come here and act as technical adviser in the establishment of social credit.

Mr. MacLachlan made his announcement of the coming trip on Tuesday afternoon.

This invitation was the main subject matter of a cable received by Mr. MacLachlan from Major Douglas last on Friday last.

Major Douglas' cable was in reply to one sent by Mr. MacLachlan inviting him to come here to serve as technical adviser to the commission which it is proposed to establish here to administer social credit under the new act authorizing same passed at the now adjourned session of the legislature.

We are wondering if Mr. MacLachlan will get there in time for the coronation.

The School Plays.

It was "comedy night" at the Opera House last Thursday evening when the high school students presented three one-act comedies, "Knaves of Hearts," "Double Crossed" and "Squaring It With the Boss," to a capacity house.

The plays were well chosen and the students fully retained their reputations. The directors are to be complimented on their choice of characters, as the different actors seemed to fit perfectly into the parts to which they were assigned.

The stage settings were very effective and the scenery, which had been painted by the students, was very cleverly done.

The School Orchestra played a number of selections, and the High School Chorus sang choruses between acts. Piano duets were given by Mildred Traub and Ruth Finlay, Betty Boorman and Marjorie Bass.

The audience was very appreciative and very favorable comments were made on the evening's entertainment.

Following were the casts in the various plays:

Thought to be Lost... But on his Way Home

Quite a little excitement occurred in town Tuesday afternoon when the 5-year-old son of D. G. Hardbattle was reported missing. His father had left him in the car on Main St. while he did his business. On his return the lad was missing apparently having got tired of waiting.

For two hours the town was searched thoroughly without results and the high school boys were called out. A car driven by Miss Edith Chambers was finally sent in the direction of the boy's home and the little fellow was found five miles from town and within a mile of his home. He apparently had decided not to wait for dad and started for home on foot.

Coronation Celebration.

Invitations are being sent out to all rural schools in the district, inviting them to take part in the celebration of the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to be held in Didsbury on the 12th of May.

It is the desire of the celebration committee that every school child in the district should be present at the celebration and the teachers are asked to organize and arrange for transportation of their scholars.

As the children will be very likely to come to town during the forenoon, they are asked to bring their lunch and the committee will provide coffee at noon.

Further information will be sent to the teachers as arrangements are completed.

Grand Concert.

The Junior and Senior Choirs of Knox United Church have prepared a very enjoyable evening for all lovers of music for next Tuesday, April 27th at 8:15. There will be choruses, quartettes, trios, readings and instrumental numbers. Everyone is assured of a very pleasant evening's entertainment.

Novelty Night.

"Novelty Night" was the attraction Tuesday at the regular social evening at the 20th Century Club. The entertainment took the form of a "midway" and lots of fun was had with the roulette wheels, Bingo, etc., money being no object. A novel attraction was "Maggie" throwing the rolling pin at "Jiggs" a game designed by Johnnie Goertz.

Al Thomas and Eileen Durrer were awarded prizes for having accumulated the most "cash."

Lunch was served and dancing enjoyed.

University Plans Adult School at Olds

Announcement has been made from the University of Alberta that it will this summer pioneer the field of Adult Education in Canada by opening an Adult School of Community Life at the Agricultural School at Olds, commencing June 24th and continuing until July 10th.

While attendance at the school will be open to all Albertans over the age of 21, it is expected that its main appeal will be to those from rural districts between the ages of 21 and 30.

The school will be the first of its kind in Canada, and is an adaptation of the Scandinavian folk high school to suit conditions in Western Canada. Plans have been arranged by President W. A. R. Kerr, H. A. Craig, deputy minister of agriculture, G. F. McNally, deputy minister of education, Donald Cameron, head of the extension department of the university, and Dr. W. G. Carpenter.

Flexibility Of Airplane Travel Responsible For The Development Of The North

If the airplane had not been invented, or if progress had been slower, a great many Canadian gold mines and prospects would never have been discovered or developed. From Saskatchewan, to Quebec, describing a vast dotted arc, there are literally hundreds of producing and potential mines, here and there in clusters such as the Red Lake, God's Lake, Bear Lake and other groups, and numerous individual enterprises. The communities which have grown up with the mines could not exist without the air lines; indeed the mines themselves would not exist because men and mines—and in many cases women and children, too—are dependent for their supplies on the gallant Canadian airmen who carry on a service that is without parallel.

For it is a bush country. That such prosperity should cover so far-flung an area is in itself amazing, writes John E. Drieman in the Christian Science Monitor. An examination of the topography reveals that the average distance between settlements is not less than 100 miles; that the one closest to steel—the railroads—is fully 140 miles distant. And in between is naught but sheerest wilderness, lakes in a confounding variety of shapes, long stretches of virgin spruce forests, reaches of bare-faced rock and long portages of treacherous muskeg.

Roads are beyond consideration. There are no telephone lines to the outside; growth has been almost too swift in this impregnable country. Some localities boast of short wave radio transmitters, and the regular radio has diminished the sense of isolation, if not the reality of it.

The ingenuity of pilots is an important quality. Today, the regular mail and passenger run may be totally uneventful. Tomorrow, the pilot may have to go off on a wild search for some uncharted lake; may have to land between upjutting rocks against unfavorable winds to deliver supplies to a trapper on the verge of starvation. Spectacular flights are practically of a routine nature.

There are no emergency landing fields other than the lakes that stud the landscape. No beacons light the way, nor radio beams. Night flying is impossible and, except for the summer, days are short. Weather, especially during the late autumn, when temperatures can drop to far below zero in a few hours, congealing the surface of the water, is uncertain. Sixty-below weather during the winter is scarcely conducive to easy flying. Yet in eight years, in over 18,000,000 passenger, mail, express and freight miles, the Airways reports not a single passenger casualty, not a single commission unfulfilled.

Pilots have been known to "sit down" on a lake for three or four days, living on fish or whatever happened to be available, waiting for the "ceiling to lift." But they have always gone through.

It is the flexibility of airplane travel that is responsible for the booming frontier which is giving body to the mining areas. In the planes, people come and go as the need arises. Children who would feel strange in an automobile are at home in the air.

On one trip, the Airway pilot carried a miner's wife, her four children, a dog, two cats and, later, a piano! The miner had obtained a better position 100 miles away. It is a frequent sight to see a trapper and his whole outfit, dog team and all, transported swiftly to his destination by plane.

An idea of the significance of air traffic can be gleaned from the fact that at Red Lake, with its 4,500 inhabitants, there is an average of 50 landings a day by Canadian Airways, Wings, Ltd., and Starratt's Airways—all this in addition to the activities of two water transport companies. And at Sioux Lookout, with a population of 2,000, there is a base of 15 flying ships, exclusive of the government forestry reserve unit, each of which averages three trips daily.

At two seasons of the year, autumn and spring, or freezeup and breakup, as these periods are better known, there is no traffic of any sort. For several weeks at each season, while the ice hardens or breaks up, there is no movement. No mail comes in or out; no fresh supply of food is available. Tractor trains must wait till well after the first of the year before they can come in.

The people of Canada should take their hats off to the brave men who face the forbidding territory of the frozen north in all weathers. They might also take their hats off to the new generation of mining men, and to the wives and families who accompany them into remote fastnesses to develop the mining area, adding to the national wealth, and earning dividends and stock raises which put money into the pockets of the people comfortably back in the cities who probably have only the vaguest idea where the mines are in which they have put their money.

For Failing Sight

Say Sunlight Is Beneficial For Eye Trouble

Direct sunlight is one of the best natural remedies for failing eyesight, says Dr. James E. Slocum, research director of the National Research Association.

The old superstition that looking at the sun injures the eyes is not in accordance with present knowledge, says the statement. Direct sunlight stimulates the nerves and eye muscles and discharges acids that gather in the tissues.

Many primitive tribes practiced sun-gazing in their religious rituals with the result that they developed unusually strong vision and preserved their sight much longer than does modern man. If the Creator had not intended us to gaze at the sun, He would have veiled it in the beginning.

Eighty percent of the students in our public schools are handicapped by defective vision. Much of this is due to the habit of moving the head instead of the eyes while reading. This produces fixation of vision. Muscles become weak and flabby. The law of the muscular system is "use or lose."

When we realize that 85 percent of our knowledge comes through the eyes, the wisdom of preserving good eyesight is apparent. Daily muscle exercise for the eyes with occasional doses of bright sunlight, will go far toward neutralizing the bad effects of fixation of vision, eye strain, and other causes incident to the habits of life.

Sir Hubert Wilkins Will Try to Locate Crocker Land

While in Ottawa, Sir Hubert Wilkins, famous Arctic explorer, told the directors of the Canadian Geographical Society his plans for a submarine expedition to the North Pole and asked them to associate their society with the project.

The submarine will be built on the River Thames, Sir Hubert said, and will leave in May, 1938, for Spitzbergen to take on supplies.

"We will start under the ice about 200 miles north of Spitzbergen," he stated, "and will have about 2,000 miles to travel, 25 per cent. of which will probably be in free water."

After crossing the North Pole the expedition would head for the Bering Sea in an effort to locate "Crocker Land." This was the territory Commander Peary's party claimed to have discovered on their polar expedition.

"If Crocker Land exists it will be Canadian territory," said Sir Hubert "and of particular value when North Polar flying is established."

Not Identical

It has been said recently that two individuals have been found who had almost identical fingerprints, but John Edgar Hoover denies this from his office as the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Los Angeles. Mr. Hoover says the "almost identical" prints have been examined by his bureau and pronounced as distinguishable one from the other.

Two minutes on the road are worth more than two months in the hospital.

General Health Improving

Present Generation Is Said to Be Superior to Any in Past

Medicine's greatest bugaboo, fear that the skill of science is preserving the "unfit" to breed weaklings, is flatly contradicted by a 20-year study announced at the University of Cincinnati.

The new medical evidence is the Cincinnati freshman class, a product of the supposed "weakling" era and breaker of all records in proving the "unfit" theory wrong.

"The present generation just coming into manhood," said Dr. Lawrence Chenoweth, professor of hygiene and director of student health service, "is physically superior to any other generation concerning which definite scientific knowledge exists."

The freshman survey, completed in the past few days, shows the average tallest and heaviest young men and women in 20 years at Cincinnati. The improvement has been uninterrupted for 20 years. It furthermore is confirmed by Harvard and other United States university records which show this trend started at least 60 years ago.

Cincinnati's freshman men are 2-10ths of an inch taller and 3-3-4 pounds heavier than those of last year. The women are 6-10ths of an inch taller; 7-10ths of a pound heavier. The 20-year gain in men, height two inches, weight 13 pounds; women, height, 1 1-2 inches, weight 2 1-2 pounds. Analyzing, Dr. Chenoweth said:

"Certain physical defects remain about the same in each class, but there are other defects which show a marked decrease through the years."

"There is less malnutrition now than formerly. Few students today show any after effects of rickets, and we suspect that rickets is gradually becoming a rare disease."

"Practically all freshmen have escaped typhoid and diphtheria. Twenty years ago these two diseases were frequently noted in students' medical histories. Tonsils and adenoids give far less trouble. Today most young men and women leave college without diseased tonsils and adenoids."

Robot Radio Alarm

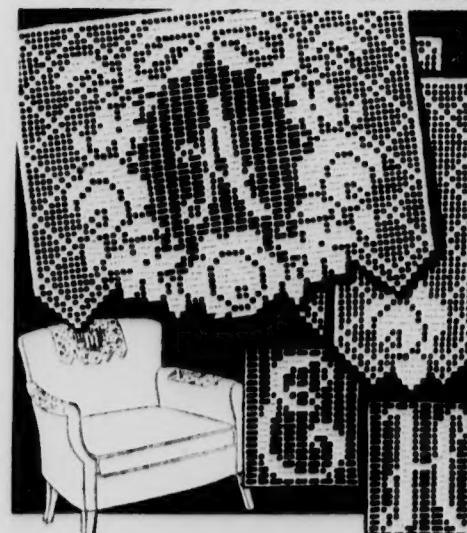

Warns of Emergency Calls When Ship's Operator Off Duty

An automatic radio alarm for use on ships, which "stands the watch" for emergency calls or SOS signals from other vessels when the radio operator is off duty, has been made available to American ship owners, the Radio Corporation of America announced.

The device, which the radio man turns on when he leaves the radio cabin, rings an alarm to call him back to listen to the dots and dashes when a certain sequence of electrical impulses, constituting the alarm signal, is intercepted from another ship.

The word "clinate" literally means "slope," and in ancient Greece climates were merely zones of latitude on the surface of the earth.

Destruction Of Historic Landmarks In London Causes Strong Protest

About Black Vultures

Scientist Finds They Have a Taste For Ripe Fruit

Dr. Alexander Wetmore of the United States National Museum spent six weeks in Guatemala studying the birds, migrant and non-migrant, of that interesting land. There he found black vultures which in that environment eat avocados, though elsewhere they subsist on flesh.

Their judgment appears to be excellent; Science says: "The avocados of that particular locality are of extra choice quality, but since they retail at only a quarter of a cent apiece the growers do not trouble to harvest their whole crop. Hence, whenever a gust of wind shakes a grove, a lot of overripe fruits drop to the ground and burst open with loud pops. Whereupon the waiting vultures in the treetops drop to the ground also and feast on the rich pulp."

Vultures have had no reputation as gourmets. On the contrary, they have long been regarded as indiscriminating in their selection of food. Dr. Wetmore exhibits these Guatemalan representatives of the family as possessed of excellent taste; no avocado equals in flavor the tree-ripened fruit; it will be observed that the black vultures do not raid the trees and peck at the half ripe fruit, as do certain less considerate birds in other communities, but wait for it to fall from the limb. Thus nature study rewards its practitioners.

New York Sun.

Particular About Colors

Even Announcers Must Wear Make-up For Television Camera

The television beauty is on the way, and, thanks to make-up, she may surpass even the comeliest movie queens. She will have an exaggerated sun tan with a luscious mouth, gorgeous hair and large, lustrous eyes. She is developing in the experimental field tests which engineers are conducting.

Oranges and browns predominate in television make-up which has to be different because the electric camera is choosy about certain colors. Red shows up white, hence brown lipstick is used with just enough red for feminine vanity.

When she acts, she must go through her part without a stop, for there can be no retakes in television as in the movies. Even the male announcers must wear make-up.

Cristobal and Colon are the two cities at the Atlantic end of the Panama Canal.

The name of God is omitted from the Book of Esther in the Bible.

While Londoners are busying themselves in beautifying the city in preparation for the great event of the era—the coronation of King George VI—a wave of popular protest is sweeping the nation against the progressive destruction of historic landmarks.

Since the days during the war, when Canada's legions stormed the citadel of England's great metropolis on those much anticipated furloughs which inevitably drew them to such spots as the Strand, Leicester Square or Piccadilly, time has wrought a tremendous change. London is going modern.

Everywhere there are signs of this trend. Streets are emblazoned in varicolored lights, modern traffic signals have been installed, snack bars and lunch counters have mushroomed through the city. New buildings of imposing and modernistic architecture have been erected or are in process of construction on every hand.

It is the latter transformation, often necessitating erasure of a site with some historic or sentimental association, that has brought the cry: "Halt the desecration."

So powerful has been the burden of the agitation that the issue finally reached the floor of the house of commons.

Editorials have appeared in most of the leading daily newspapers supporting the movement for the preservation of the country's beauty, and thousands of letters have appeared in the columns of the press deplored what has been variously called "vandalism," "barbarous destruction" and "municipal hara-kiri."

It has been pointed out that "Goodbye Piccadilly, Farewell Leicester Square" is taking on a new significance. Demolition of the famous Alhambra is to be followed by an even more interesting building—the former home of Sir Joshua Reynolds. The scene of the familiar engravings showing Johnson, Boswell, Garrick and others of their circle, is one of its rooms.

Such famous London monuments as Waterloo bridge, Carlton House terrace, the Adelphi, Lansdowne house, the 17th and 18th century mansions in Whitehall have already been demolished. Extension of Covent Garden has involved the wrecking of many ancient buildings in Long Acre; exclusive Mayfair has been caught in the renovation rage and more recently the judicial committee of the privy council gave judgment which will consign the Church of All Hallows to the pick and shovel.

The church, located in the heart of the banking district, will give way to a modern structure. Designed in 1694 by Sir Christopher Wren, the famous architect who designed St. Paul's, it lies among a group of venerable churches, among them St. Edmunds the King.

The Evolution Theory

Jesuit Scholar Contends Man Has Descended From the Apes

Father Teilhard de Chardin, Jesuit scholar, one of the most eminent geologists in the world, presented an international gathering of scientists with evidence which he said showed man must be considered as descending from apes.

"But," he said, "in these discoveries there need be no difficulty for Christianity. As a scientist I must admit the evidence that man was born from the animal kingdom. The great, the tremendous, the significant fact about man is the coming of thought with and through him."

Father de Chardin brought to this country for the first time the exhibits, photographs and studies of the discovery near Peking of Sinanthropus, a primitive man who lived hundreds of thousands of years ago.

Eating More Cheese

Improvement in industrial conditions in Scotland is bringing about a greater consumption of cheese. Last year Canada supplied more cheese to Scotland than for any year since statistics have been available, the increase amounting to 31 per cent. over the previous year, according to the Agricultural Department of the Canadian National Railways.

The World of Wheat.

By H. G. L. STRANGE

Director "Crop Testing Plan."

The spring wheat crops now being seeded in Western Canada and in the northwestern parts of the United States, will be anxiously watched by the whole world, for the progress of these two crops will unquestionably have an important effect upon wheat prices during the coming months.

As these crops flourish, price will tend to decline, but should their prospects become lessened, then price will tend to rise.

What are the actual prospects at this moment?

Moisture records collected and compiled daily from over 600 rain gauges in Western Canada by the Research Department of the Searle Grain Co. indicate that probably never has the Canadian crop—and this refers to the U.S.A. crop also—started with so little moisture reserve in the soil.

The records show that at the moment Alberta has only 80% of the normal subsoil moisture, Manitoba 68% and Saskatchewan 57%.

This means that if an average crop (which would be about 400 million bushels on our present western wheat acreage) is to be secured, that very much better than average rainfall, which average is about 8 inches, must occur between this time and August 1st next.

Rainfall, therefore, will be the important factor to watch.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Roumania temporarily prohibits wheat exports -- Broomhall may raise import requirements estimate -- Rains needed to condition soil for seeding in southern hemisphere -- Cold weather retards Russian spring seedings -- Polish winter crop prospects doubtful -- Spring seedings delayed in the U.S. -- Spain still contracting for wheat.

Following factors have tended to lower price: Rains break the long drought in Central China -- Australian wheat estimate increased by 15 million -- U.S. government estimates winter wheat crop at 650 million -- Beneficial rains in Western Canada -- Uncertainty of gold policy in Great Britain and U.S. -- France removes important license taxes on apples and pears.

Spring Touch of Whitewash

In the spring the farmer's fancy may rightly turn to thoughts of whitewash, for after the long winter the barns, creamery, and home fences look much in need of being brightened up. Even town dwellers will find that an outbuilding would be none the worse for a spring touch-up. And there is nothing, after all, better or so inexpensive as whitewash.

Persons are often deterred from using whitewash through the fear that a shower of rain might ruin it, but the Dominion Experimental Farms have evolved a waterproof whitewash for outdoor work which will prevent a newly whitewashed barn from looking a picture of desolation after a downpour. It is made up in the following proportions: slake 62 lbs quick-lime in 12 gallons hot water, add 2 lbs. salt and 1 lb. sulphate of zinc dissolved in 2 gallons of water. To this add 2 gallons of skim-milk. An ounce of alum, though not essential, improves the wash. Salt should be omitted if the whitewash is required for metal surfaces which rust.

For farm buildings, disinfectant whitewash may be desired. Here is a recipe recommended by the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask.: First, 50 lbs. lime are dissolved in 8 gallons of boiling water. To this is added 6 gallons of hot water which has 10 lbs. salt and 1 lb. alum dissolved in it. A can of lye is added to every 25 gallons of the mixture, and a pound of cement to every 3 gallons is gradually added and thoroughly stirred. The object of using the alum is to prevent the lime from rubbing off. Cement makes a more creamy mixture, so that it is easier to apply and more surface is covered. Lye is added for disinfecting purposes, but a quart of creosol to every 8 gallons would serve the same purpose. Lye is preferred when the color is to be kept white.

Mountain View Notes.

With an attendance of fourteen members and several visitors, the Mt.-View W.I. meeting for April was held at the home of Mrs. Ed. Barnes. Several resolutions for the forthcoming provincial convention were read and met with the approval of the majority of the members. Mrs. Blain and Mrs. St Claire were chosen to go to the convention and their decision will be made known at the May meeting. The finished quilt was viewed and it will be raffled at some future date. A musical program was enjoyed, the artistes being Miss Ethel Bruce, Miss Louise Schultz and Mrs. Gulliver. The meeting then adjourned. The members will convene at the home of Mrs. Birdsall for the May meeting. Mrs. Schultz staged a contest as tea was being prepared and Miss Louise Schultz was the winner. Delightful refreshments were served by Misses Barnes and Bruce.

Paying 5 to 1 Road Tax.

Ever since the automobile became a recognized means of transportation, the motorist has been taking it on the chin. One does not have to point to Alberta as the horrible example, but it happens to be the province on which the facts at the moment are available.

In its financial year that ended with March, it drew a net revenue of $2,219,725 from the fuel oil tax. Its motor vehicle branch collected $1,424,987 from license fees on motor cars and trucks. On top of this it collected $121,739 for drivers' licenses. This makes the sizeable total of $3,766,451.

The 93,000 odd automobiles in Alberta are paying a tidy tax for the privilege of travelling on Alberta roads. It is a tax that would be heavy if the roads were good, but as the Edmonton Bulletin points out, is out of all reason considering their actual condition.

“If it is a sound principle,” says the Bulletin, “that every service should pay for itself, the motorist is not getting a square deal or anything approaching it. The money that is taken from him as a road tax does not go into roads. Against the $3,766,451 collected from him, slightly more than $600,000 was spent during the same period in roads.”

Paying $5.00 and getting $1.00 in return is too heavy odds against any class of the community.

WEEKLY JOKES

“Say, Doctor, I asked that nurse to put a hot water bottle at my feet, but she stuck up her nose and walked away,” complained the patient. “What else could you expect? That was the head nurse,” explained the doctor.

“Oh, do they specialize that much? Then send me the foot nurse.”

Herman Trele, perennial wheat king of Wembley, has been presented with a de luxe Ford V-8 car from Henry Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, in recognition of his fame in producing championship grains. Besides the car, the gift includes free servicing in any part of the world, the Imperial Oil Co. having joined with Mr. Ford by offering to supply all gas and oil for the car wherever it may be.

A new series of Canadian coins will be minted this year, with the likelihood of getting into circulation shortly after the coronation. Finance Minister Charles Dunning announced Friday. The denominations will range from one cent to one dollar. Master dies and punches of the obverse bearing the effigy of King George VI, modelled by T. H. Paget of the Royal Mint, London, are expected at Ottawa shortly.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King will read the first lesson of the Empire Day service of thanksgiving attended by the King and Queen in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, on May 24th. Representatives of the Dominions and colonies will be present. Similar services following the coronations of Edward VII and George V, were given no specific imperial significance.

New Lieutenant-Governor

J. C. Bowen Succeeds The Late Col. Primrose In Alberta

J. C. Bowen, whose appointment as lieutenant-governor of Alberta was announced in Ottawa, succeeds Col. P. C. H. Primrose who died in Edmonton recently.

The new lieutenant-governor was born at South Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 3, 1872. In 1904, he was graduated by Brandon college as a theologian and later held charges in Baptist churches at Dauphin, Man., and Winnipeg. He became secretary of the board of education for the Baptist Union of western Canada but in 1912 serious eye trouble forced him to give up church work and he came to Edmonton and entered the insurance business.

Mr. Bowen was appointed chaplain of the 63rd battalion in the summer of 1915, serving in France with the 14th artillery brigade. He returned to Edmonton in 1918.

The new lieutenant-governor's public life started in 1920 when he was elected an alderman of Edmonton. The following year he was elected to the Alberta legislature as a Liberal and when C. R. Mitchell, party leader at that time, was appointed to the bench, he became house leader.

Late in 1925, the strain of public life aggravated his old eye trouble and only a delicate operation saved his sight. He was defeated in the 1926 provincial election and in 1928 for the Edmonton mayoralty.

During 1936, a total of 21,292 persons visited the Prince Albert National Park as compared with 21,108 in the previous year. There was considerable government building activity at Waskesiu, headquarters of the park during the past twelve months. The more important buildings erected were the museum, centrally located in the business section of the townsite, and the residential quarters for married members of the staff. In addition, the golf clubhouse was completed and a small caddy house and work shop erected. Other improvements included grading and graveling of streets.

Distinguished Aviator

Matt Berry of Edmonton Presented With McKee Trophy

Pilot Matt Berry, of Edmonton, who did the most "outstanding work for Canadian aviation during 1936," received the McKee trophy in Montreal.

Another great Canadian ace, Air Vice-Marshall W. A. Bishop, V.C., made the presentation to the northern flier at the 38th annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

In presenting the McKee trophy to Berry, Vice-Marshall Bishop said the committee not only was honoring Canada's most outstanding flier, "but the distinguished list to which he belongs."

Berry's name had been recommended for the trophy several times before. The contribution to aviation of the quiet-spoken 49-year-old westerner had not been restricted to the past year but went back to war days when he started flying.

Tanned from years of flying in northern Canada, Berry received the trophy with the same modesty that has accompanied the exploits that placed him at the top of Canada's aviation heroes.

He acknowledged the applause of the mining delegates with a smile, thanked Vice-Marshall Bishop for the trophy and went back to his seat. He made no mention of the fact he had flown from Edmonton and only a few hours before had arrived in Montreal.

Made Odd Request

Frenchman's Wishes Will Be Carried Out With One Exception

Odd wishes of the Marquis d'Urre d'Aubais, who died recently, were discovered when he left a will giving £100,000 to the French government—but on these conditions: His body was to be embalmed, seated in an armchair, then placed in a glass box. The glass box was then to be placed in a room for ever lighted, surrounded by pictures of his family. In one corner of the room there was to be a radio set. This room was to be thrown open to fishermen of the village of Carro, near Marseilles, for their own use. These fishermen were the marquis' friends in life. He wanted them around him in death.

Stood Behind Their Law

People In Rome Succeeded In Abolishing Gladiator Shows

It is sometimes said that Christianity abolished gladiatorial shows in Rome. That is, perhaps, not quite true. Those shows went on under Christianity as they went on under Paganism. There was no law against them. But one day a poor monk, named Telemachus, jumped into the arena, and begged two gladiators in the name of their common religion, to desist from their murderous combat. The immense crowd, feeling that they were being cheated of their sport by an interloper, cried out "Kill him! Kill him!" Several times the gladiators thrust him aside, but he persisted, and as the cry of "Kill him! Kill him!" rose higher and higher, they did kill him. And then, after the games for the day were over, the people wanted to know what this poor monk had jumped into the arena for. When the facts were revealed to them, the populace of Rome, stricken with sorrow and ashamed of their inhuman cry, went en masse to the authorities, and history records that never again was a gladiatorial exhibition held in Rome. Such exhibitions were at once prohibited, but the prohibition would have been a failure if the normal sentiment of the people had not been responsible for the statute, and stood behind it.—The Argonaut.

Fined For Cruelty

Officer Who Kicked Dog Paid $160 Into Salisbury Court

Cruelly kicking a dog at the Cathederal hotel, Salisbury, cost an officer in the Royal Air Force a maximum fine of $125 and $35 costs at Salisbury City. It was stated in evidence that the officer chased the dog into a courtyard and took a flying kick at it, lifting it into the air. The dog, a Pekingese belonging to the landlord's wife, died, and was found to have a fractured jaw and a fractured skull. The officer, who pleaded "Not Guilty," said that the dog was making a lot of noise.

Balance on Right Side

The Telegraph-Journal, Saint John, says the fact to remember is what the King and the Royal Family receive from the British nation is very considerably less than the revenues the King hands over to the nation. Under the circumstances, Great Britain is not likely to request contributions from the dominions.

The "elephant" shrew is one of the smallest animals known to mankind.

The Isle of Man, like Ireland, has no toads or snakes.

Gardening

More experienced gardeners warn against working soil too early. With clay, it is especially dangerous to dig where there is too much moisture in the ground. Such soil is liable to puddle and when drying out it may bake. In any case there is no advantage, and the work would have to be done over again later on. A good rule is to squeeze a handful of earth in the hand. If it compacts into a ball, the enthusiast is well advised to go back and read a book for a few days. On the other hand, if the soil simply crumbles when released by the hand it is fit for working.

Flower growers are rediscovering the charm of fragrance. For a long period, color schemes and changing styles of design have commanded so much attention that the old art of planting for scent was almost forgotten.

With the trend changing, however, the nose is competing with the eye in making final decisions on candidates for spring planting. The gardener who would be up-to-date must become acquainted with the plants to grow for fragrance.

For the same reason, perhaps, that the sense of smell is accentuated in the blind, we become more conscious of garden fragrance when the brilliant light of the summer day fades, and twilight makes of the garden a fairytale. Some flowers whose perfume is not detected in the daylight become fragrant at night. Others give off at night a perfume different from their daytime scent.

Leaf lettuce, radish, spinach and the first sown of the garden peas will be among the earliest vegetables sown. These may be planted as soon as the ground is fit to work. All of the first named seeds should be sown at least three times, at intervals of ten days so that there will be a succession of vegetables. The second group to go in will be carrots, beets, onions, potatoes, etc., which can stand a little frost, and then beans, corn and tomato, cabbage and cauliflower plants, etc., which kill with frost, and finally those hot weather vegetables like lima beans, squash well started, egg and pepper plants, cucumbers, melons and similar things. All garden rules, it should be remembered, however, are only approximate and should be varied a little to suit the local climate and individual preference.

Cat-Eating Rats Amaze People In Chinese Village

Cat-eating rats may be seen in Linan village, just a few hours' walk west of Hangchow, China. The rats were eating the cats, and the inhabitants were too intimidated to do anything about it. Linan long has been noted in eastern China for the preoccupation of its rodent population, but even Linan never has had anything like this before. The amazed populace just stand around watching huge families of rats gang up on their arch enemies and do what every rat always wanted to do.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

THE YELLOW BRIAR

A Story of the Irish on the Canadian Countryside

By PATRICK SLATER

By arrangement with Thomas Allen, Publisher, Toronto.

At the moment Toronto had become a booming frontier town. For fifty years previously, the obscure, isolated, little place had been struggling within its muddy self to keep up the smart military and social swagger of the capital of Upper Canada. Its trade had been obliged to play second fiddle to high-hatted policies of crown government. Things had moved slowly. To amount to anything in those days, a person required an official job or an official connection of some kind.

But rapid changes were now setting in. The magnetic telegraph had arrived; and railroads were things actively thought about. The Canada Company was pushing settlement with vigor. There had been a crop failure in Europe in the summer of 1846; and the rot or curl in the prairies, that brought woe to the thatched cottages of Ireland and the shielings of the Highlands, gave better prices for farm produce to the log cabins of Canada. A flood of immigration set in, which in one season dumped thirty-five thousand newcomers at the port of the placid, little, official town—mostly wild Irish, but many people, also, from the Highlands and the English counties.

Hammers rang early and late, in all directions, cracking up frame dwellings and lodging places. In 1847, Toronto was a town of small creeks, tanbark and taverns. With 17,000 residents, the little city had 136 full licensed taverns and 32 stores with liquor shop licenses. Some of the immigrants brought little gear with them, but they had plenty of hats and ugly suspicions packed in their settlers' effects as they crossed the ocean.

A few days after my mother and I arrived, I knocked up an acquaintance with a young lad by the name of Jack Trueman, whose father kept the Tavern Tyrone, a small public house on the south side of Queen Street, just around the second corner. He was a man of great strength both in deed and word. When his temper was stirred, he tossed his beard about with his hand; and he could banty great oaths with the best of men. John Trueman was a teetotaler, and always wore a boiled shirt. Jack told me he wore it to bed. Himself was a stalky, middle-aged man; and no doubt he died in the honest belief that he had always been the complete master of his household. The family were Protestants, and attended the Church of St. George the Martyr, on John Street. The tavern was a decent, tidy, well-kept lodging place; and those who frequented the small tap-room facing the street were Irishmen whose views agreed with those held by Himself of the boiled shirt. He had a tart, bitter tongue for the views of all others; and they went elsewhere for their liquor.

I got along first rate with young Jack Trueman, because I let him boss me around to his heart's content. I split kindling willingly for him, and I slopped in buckets of water for use in the kitchen. He was a harsh taskmaster over me, and many a time I got a smart clout on the lug and was told to take that for a dirty little dogan. But at other times, he was open-handed enough and a good sharer. I liked to hang around the Tavern Tyrone; and I paid cheerfully for the privilege. It was young Trueman who showed me the town; and at first I believed everythang he told me.

What appealed strongly to my young mind about the Trueman place was a narrow alleyway to the east of the tavern, leading back to a stable in the rear where two cows and pigeons were kept. I liked the job of chivying the cows along Queen Street to a pasture field to the west. One evening the cows got in the way of the carriage of His Lordship, the Chief Justice, and I got a wicked cut from the coachman's whip.

All Trueman's cows were breachy by nature; and for years they were headstrong in the notion that a cow-path should be made across the field in front of Osgoode Hall (the seat of the law courts of Upper Canada). The heavy and formidable iron fence along Queen Street stands to this day in front of the law courts as a memorial to John Trueman's cows. The law, they say, is tender in its treatment of established customs and ancient ways. For generations, the Bench and Bar of Ontario have continued to sidle and dodge themselves into the precincts of Osgoode Hall through curious stock-yard openings that were specially designed in Europe to keep out Trueman's cows. Some monument to a woman's milk pail! And, by the way, the young lady from Baltimore got her blugrey eyes as an heirloom from Sarah Trueman of the Tavern Tyrone.

On my rare visits to Toronto, years back, one of my pleasures was to take my stand a little before dinner-time at the head of York Street, and watch Her Majesty's Justices negotiate those barricaded openings in their haste to start a heavy day's work. But, latterly, I haven't been in Toronto much. The last Judge I saw doing the trick was His Lordship, the late Chief Justice, Sir Glenholme Falconbridge. The ageing judge was totting a green bag and getting through seemed quite an effort. What a master Falconbridge was of the English tongue, and how sparingly he used it! He liked to catch speckled trout up our way also—if his companion rowed the boat. But if he left it to others to write the long judgments, he did into English an exquisite lyric:

Come, Lesbia, while we may;
Let's live and love our lives away;
And care not what the old folk say.
The sun that sets will rise again as bright:
There is no rising for our little light;
It sets in never ending night.
Count me a thousand kisses o'er,
Count me a thousand kisses o'er,
And then, we'll count them o'er and o'er again!

If getting along agreeably with young Trueman was sometimes a problem for me, young Jack often had occasion to scratch his head over problems of his own. His father was a stern, arbitrary man of harsh temper, and sorely set on ruling his son. Many a good beating he gave the boy. One morning I was viewing one of these affairs from the corner of the alley. Jack was hollering blue murder.

His mother, Sarah, a quiet, kindly woman, and a simple soul after all, stepped out into the yard to do something about it.

"Are you aware, Sir," she remonstrated, "that you are beating the boy unmercifully?"

"Aye, Madame!" said Himself between the whelts. "I am trying hard to do that same."

The mother's pent-up feelings hurried her away quickly through the kitchen door. Jack's collie was also objecting; but he stood his ground, and showed his teeth. After a moment, his feelings got the better of him. He went right in and took a biting hold on the man's calf. The dog meant business, and the North of Ireland let out a grand howl. The three of us scuttled down the alley.

On the morning of the 24th of May, the guns at the fort spoke; and the 81st Regiment of Foot paraded in honour of the young Queen. It was a gala day for the local gentry. Upper Canada had the spirit and turn of mind of a small crown colony. It had been founded by families who suffered on the King's side in the old colonies. It had justified its very existence as a protest against American ways and methods. It had grown slowly, leaning heavily on England for spiritual and economic support. But free trade in England had recently knocked the prop from under the Canadian flour barrel. There was the smell, moreover, of radical political changes in the local air. And now people of no account were flocking into the country, more concerned with making a living than in supporting the established order. How necessary that a strong demonstration of loyalty be given!

And the old order extended itself. That evening the people around York Street got full and felt happy; and the gentry drove their ladies in open carriages to a fancy dress ball. Of a sudden it rained cats and dogs. There were many yards of material in a lady's costume in those spacious days; and when one considers the undies they wore, it is a problem how the young creatures got their things dried out that night to dance the light fantastic.

The festival of St. John the Baptist arrived. Young Jack confided to me there would be great goings-on at the Trueman place that night. Himself and Mr. William Cassidy—him that kept the gaol—were forming a secret society; and the first meeting would be held in the front room upstairs. Some Mr. Grand Lodge in Dublin had written letting them do it. I was impressed with the awful and horrible nature of this business. They would have John McLaughlin at the door to keep anyone from spying on them. They wrote their names in blood, so Jack told me. They drank each other's blood. It was enough to make a fellow's hair stand on end.

If ever a thorough job of house cleaning was done, the Trueman women did it that day. I went around in the evening to look the situation over. The street door of the tap-room was closed. There were Scots and other strangers about the place, all in their Sunday clothes and wearing little pinnies. Everyone of them looked as handsome as the knave of hearts.

Yes, something seemed to be going on in the front room over the bar.

I sneaked upstairs to have a look, but Mrs. Trueman saw me. She said I had better be slipping away home.

I asked Mr. Michael O'Hagan, our landlord, about the affair. He had a drop of drink taken.

"Arrah, my boy!" he exclaimed. "Beware of them cursed Masons."

Cost of Coronation

Estimated That Expenses Will Reach $2,270,000

The coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in May will be the costliest affair of its kind in the history of Great Britain. It will take approximately $2,270,000 out of public funds, according to treasury estimates.

In reality, the government will spend about $2,620,000, but $350,000 will be returned in the form of revenue from procession grandstand seats.

This is a far greater sum than has been spent on any previous coronation.

Expenses of the royal household in connection with the coronation, including entertainment of royal and foreign prominents, are estimated at $500,000.

Cost of previous coronations, in round figures, follow: George IV in 1821, $1,200,000; William IV in 1831, $211,000; Victoria in 1838, $350,000; Edward VII in 1902, $965,000; George V in 1911, $1,000,000.

Has Had Amazing Career

Stanley Baldwin Has Achieved Much In Quiet Way

It is probable that when the delegates gather for the Imperial conference in May, Mr. Baldwin will explain to them the scope of the problems they have to solve, welcome them to London, wish them godspeed, and close his political career forever.

Few men are able to look back at quite so long a life of unspectacular, yet tremendous achievement. The secret of Mr. Baldwin's success, we suspect, is the fact that he has never cared for the shadow of power, always for the substance. Office for its own sake—for the ribbons and the glory—is for Mr. Baldwin vanity of vanities. As a result his career has been amazingly free from the particular sort of weaknesses that go with personally ambitious men.

Mr. Baldwin will take many secrets with him into the silence. The closing of his public life will be like closing of a book, some of the pages of which have never been cut.—Hamilton Spectator.

Little Helps For This Week

Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, think on these things. Phil. 4:8.

Still may Thy sweet mercy spread A loving arm above my head, About my paths; so shall I find The fair centre of my mind Thy temple, and those lovely walls Bright ever with a beam that falls Fresh from the pure glance of Thine eye, Lighting to eternity.

Make yourself think pleasant thoughts. None of us yet know what fairy palaces we may build of them, proof against any adversity. Bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful sayings, treasure houses of precious and restful thoughts, which care cannot disturb, nor pain make gloomy, nor poverty take away from us. Houses built without hands, for our souls to live in. For nowhere either with more quiet or more freedom from trouble does a man retire than into his own soul, particularly when he has within him such thoughts, that by looking into them he is immediately in perfect tranquility. And tranquility is nothing else than the good ordering of the mind.

Thought For Motorists

An angry motorist was heard complaining to a friend of the "unfair" way in which traffic policemen sometimes hide around a corner and then step out to check up on infractions of the "stop" regulations. There is, however, one way says the Edmonton Journal, in which this and other motorists can fool such policemen: They can stop at all "stop" signs.

RHEUMATIC PAINS are TORTURE!

Don't let rheumatic pains make your life miserable. Poisonous acids from faulty kidney action are probably the cause. Gin Pills drive out these poisons by toning up the kidneys so they can filter the blood properly. "Prove their merit through their use!"

WEEKLY SERMONETTE

Matter as well as prayer is a mystery. When we drop a lump of sugar into a cup of coffee, whether the charge which takes place is mechanical or chemical, scientists fail to agree. We are sure, however, that the coffee is sweetened thereby
—and for most of us that is enough.
Christians know that by dropping a prayer into a day, we sweeten the day. How this is brought about we know not, for none have sight keen enough to follow the flight of the prayer, but we are content that our day is really sweetened.
